

HOME DEMONSTRATION. WORK IN OTHER PLACES

GREAT RESULTS BEING ACCOMPLISHED IN VARIOUS SECTIONS OF THE U. S.

WASHINGTON, September 27.—When James Wilson was Secretary of Agriculture he took a notion one day that it was all well enough for Uncle Sam to do all he could to help the men and boys that live on the farm to provide them with every possible advantage—but what was the matter also with trying to make things a bit easier for the women and the girls? For weren't there about as many women and girls on the farms as men and boys and weren't they all working toward the same end?

It was a homely sort of an idea, not a bit spectacular or sensational, but it furnished the beginnings for many activities within the Department of Agriculture which have not assumed a broad and national importance. The idea of Secretary Wilson was tried out in an experimental way by the organization of girls' canning clubs—four of them, in two States. Now more than fifty thousand girls and thousands of women are enrolled for home extension work, under the supervision of the Bureau of Home Economics. Last year 7,793 first-year members of canning clubs put up 5,021,237 pounds of tomatoes, gathered from home gardens of one-tenth of an acre in area each. These products were put up in 1,815,924 cans, jars and other receptacles, and their estimated value was $284,850, of which nearly $200,000 was clear profit. The average estimated profit per member was $23.50. That was from the tomatoes alone. The girls also put up thousands of dollars' worth of other products from the farm and orchard.

Promoting "Tama Jim's" Idea

Two bureaus, called, respectively, the offices of extension work in the South, and in the North and West, have been active in carrying to women and children the assistance born of the "Tama Jim" Wilson idea. Most of it thus far has been carried to the South, and Miss Mary E. Creswell and Miss Ola Powell have been directing this work under the supervision of Bradford Knapp, chief of the extension work. Miss Powell, a native of Texas, was appointed to her position in the Federal service from Cleveland, O. Miss Creswell is a native of Pennsylvania, but was appointed from Georgia. Their work is typically woman's work, and a crops of trained and expert women, employed by the Department of Agriculture, is traveling through the States and counties, carrying into effect the plans of these exceedingly skilled and thoroughly experienced leaders in the movement. They are teaching the girls and women on the farms how to use the resources at their disposal so as to bring in cash returns as well as to make them valuable auxiliaries of the home. At present there are 450 women State and county agents carrying out the plans thus divulged to them. The State agent has charge of the work as a unit in her State and she appoints the county agents and superintends their activities. The field agents of the department supervise the State agents, and Misses Creswell and Powell keep the field agents supplied with ideas and energy. "The main object of it all," says Miss Powell, "showing her grasp of the situation and its possibilities and condensing the doctrine into a sentence, 'is to raise standards of living.'"

One-Tenth Acre Required

So they began at the beginning. The canning club work as it is now carried on embraces a four-year course for girls between the ages of 10 and 18. Each girl must have for her own use one-tenth of an acre of ground. During the first year the plot is given over to the raising of tomatoes, some of which may be sold in bulk, but which are especially used for canning and packing in ways which bring profit. The second year the girls grow tomatoes on one-half of their one-tenth acre and one other garden crop, such as beans, peas, peppers, okra, beets or onions in the other. Third year girls grow three crops, and the fourth year girls specialize along the line of fancy packing of special products. The girls take care also of surplus fruits from the orchards, while they are canning their demonstration garden products, and the experience gained in putting up vegetables assists them in proper canning of the fruits. Sometimes the extension office encourages the girls to substitute five or ten fruit trees for one of the vegetable crops after the first or second year. In such case, when the girl reaches her fourth year, her plot is set to perennials, on the theory for high school or college the perennial plot will be cared for by those who remain behind.

Another feature of the club work is the winter garden. An 11-year-old club member in Virginia began a winter garden on November 16, planting spinach, lettuce, radishes, rape, kale and mustard in November and December in a 20 by 50-foot strip, and potatoes and peas in March and April. She gathered in all 357 pounds of vegetables and sold 700 collared plants, 899 cabbage plants and 400 tomato plants. This crop brought $17.05, of which $14.25 was profit. "My mother has learned to take a great many new dishes out of the vegetables in my winter garden," the girl wrote to Miss Powell.

A Proud Mother

Many homely letters on the subject are received by Miss Powell. Most of them show the pride taken in the work. "I want to tell you about my girls exhibit this week," runs a missive from the North Carolina State agent. "It being court week, and the first Monday, too, gave all the county officials and a great many country people an opportunity to see the jars. After I saw how it was taking, I put a notice in the paper that the office would be open all day Thursday for general inspection. In the meantime I had three select 48 jars for the State fair. These I placed on a table in the center of the room. Right after dinner the clerk of the court came in and said that there were three drummers in town representing the biggest concerns in the United States, and he wanted to bring them in to see what 'our folks' could do, so I told him to go and get them. They said our peach preserves were the prettiest they ever saw. They were also pleased with the snap beans, the ruby beans, the okra, the corn and the pimientos; also the watermelon rind preserves. They said they would purchase a carload of fig preserves and damson jam if we could furnish it next year.

Having set in motion the wheels that will drive the organization of girls, the department is now beginning to look after the women. They are encouraged to begin with chicken raising, which is regarded as much better suited to women than to children. Instructions are given in testing and grading eggs, in shipping by parcel post and express, and in persuading the women of various communities to sell co-operatively. Egg-selling associations are being organized and placed on a solid basis. Here's what the department's Mississippi agent wrote to Miss Powell:

Down in Mississippi

"There are now fifty co-operative egg-selling associations and junior poultry clubs. One of the associations, with packing center at Centerville has a membership of 17. This association has sold over $500 worth of eggs at prices ranging from 20 to 25 per cent about market prices. Another association has a membership of 20 and has sold 3,515 dozen of eggs."

"Last year," Miss Powell explains, "we began demonstration work among the women. Already we have an enrollment of 7,000 women in 250 rural communities, with 4,000 demonstrations to their benefit and total attendance at the meetings of 75,000. The results are gratifying and most promising and they all tend toward the one end—the uplifting of conditions on the farm, better homes and surroundings, and higher outlook intellectually and materially for the women in the rural communities throughout the land."

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know I will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.
